Blood-Poisoning

The great efficacy of Hood's Sarsa-parilla in cases of blood-poisoning is shown by many convincing testimo-nials, as by the following: "My hus-band suffered ifrom blood-poisoning. and sores spread all over his right hand. Two fingers of his left hand were also affected. He tried all sorts of singurants, but they failed. At my were also affected. He tried all sorte of eintenents, but they failed. in the riot.

The strike, which was accompanied by much violence, enlisting organized and unorganized workers on one hand and mill owners on the other, with the police of Lawrence and militia of Massachusetts on guard to avert disastrous consequences, attracted world-wide attention for many weeks. Riots were frequent: cars in Lawrence were wide attention for many were frequent; cars in Lawrence were attacked; men, women and children who attempted to work were assalled, and in some cases injured, and there and in some cases injured, and there were repeated clashes between strikers and the organized forces of the law until citizens of Lawrence were alarmed at the threatening struggle. Its climax came on January 29, a day begun with a parade of agitated foreign workers to demonstrate their solidarity against the mill owners, and ended with a rlot, in which the young woman was stain and Oscar Benoit, a Lawrence policeman, stabbed.

Coagress Appealed Te.

Even Congress was appealed To.

Even Congress was appealed to during the struggle following an attempt of strike leaders to take from Lawrence to Philadelphia 100 children of strikers' families to be cared for by sympathizers. This effort, preceded by successful deportation of strikers' children to New York and other cities, was frustrated by the police in a clash at the railroad station, in which fathers, mothers and children clashed with the authorities. Many men and women were arrested. This occurrence, wilely heraided, aroused protests from all parts of the United States, and Congress Appealed To. women were arrested. Into women were arrested and prompted victor Berger, Socialist member of the House of Ropresentatives, to plan r congressional investigation of the strike and working conditions in the mills of the American Woolen Company and others. A resolution directing such an inquiry brought about a preliminary hearing before the Rules Committee of the House, in which Lawrence strikers, men, women and children, representatives of the mill owners and representatives of the Lawrence authorities participated. The hearings held in the caucus room of the House Office Building in Washington aroused intense interest, hundreds of persons, including Mrs. Taft, wife of persons, including Mrs. Taft, wife of aroused intense interest number of persons, including Mrs. Taft, wife of the President, attending them for several days. Descentration by Strikers.

Conferences to settle the strike had failed, and on the morning of January 39 an organised street parade and demonstration by the strikers occurred. It was preceded by rioting before sunrise, in which the street cars were pelted with chunks of ice and other missles and persons forcibly prevented from going to work in the mills. After the parade Ettor and Glovannitti addressed the strikers in Lawrence Common, where they are alleged to have urged the strikers to acts of wolence. That evening the streets near the mills were isammed with the idle millworkers. Soldiers and police were ordered to clear the streets. The spirit of the hour was a dangerous one. The people sulienly responded to the orders of the police and hissed them. Many blocks of ice were thrown at the officers of the law. Policemen's clubs, in retaliation, were wielded over the backs of recalcitrant strikers, when suddenly shooting began and Anna Lopizzo fell lifeless in the street. Other riots followed the next day, and that midnight Ettor and Glovannitti were arrested, charged with being accessories before the fact to the Lopizzo murder. Later Caruso was arrested, charged with serious and actual participant in the fatal riot.

Dangerous Condition.

The arrest of Ettor and Giovannitti fanned to a fury the flames of feeling among the agitated foreigners, and conditions were even more dangerous. Threats were made of a general strike, organizations throughout the country and in other lands protesting against the action of the authorities. Ettor and Giovannitti pleaded not guilty on January 31, but were held to the grand fury without ball and locked up in the uary 31, but were held to the grand fury without ball and locked up in the Lawrence jall until February 9, when, after a hearing, they were held to the grand jury and later indicted. The strike continued under the leadership now of W. D. Haywood until March 14, when the cause of the workers was victorious and the strike was officially declared off. The workers gained increases in pay ranging from 7 to 15 per cent and concessions in working conditions.

Indictment of the strike leaders and principals to the crime, as an actual participant in the fatal riot.

Indictment of the strike leaders and Indictment of the strike leaders and Caruso brought about an organized, world-wide effort to raise a defense fund, and workers from many countries responded. Threats of a general world strike in protest against the action again were made, and since the beginning of the trial Lawrence has been flooded with circulars denouncing the agents of the sourts and the conditions of the case. Threats to storm the agents of the courts and the condi-tions of the case. Threats to storm the jall have been made and feeling has run riot up to the very close of the case. When the trial began a twenty-four-hour strike of protest was responded to by 50,000 workers in mills throughout New England.

The case, after several delays, was actually taken up early in October in the Superior Court of Essex County be-fore Justice Joseph F. Quinn. Efforts to get a jury exhausted a panel of 300 veniremen, and another delay until
